

Inside the Sales Office of Robert A.M. Stern's 20 East End Ave.

The idea behind 20 East End Avenue, the Corigin-developed, Robert A.M. Stern-designed condo building rising next to the East River, is to provide residents (who will be paying \$4.5 million and up) with the same type of experience that one would get from owning a classic Emery Roth or Rosario Candela co-op. Since an entirely faithful homage to those types of ... read more...
